`www.adobe.com/products/photoshop-elements.html` Word processors Word processors have been around for a long time. Originally it was just a typewriter program that converted the typed words into a set of pages of text. It is still possible to use a typewriter as a word processor, although the price of new machines may be a deterrent to purchase. Word processors have very wide appeal and offer basic formatting features, text and graphics insertion, and a number of other tools that make the process of producing a finished document quick and easy. Here are a few well-known word processors that are well suited for graphic design: * Microsoft Word (for Windows):
`www.microsoft.com` * Microsoft Word for Mac: `www.apple.com` * Adobe InDesign (for Mac and Windows): `www.adobe.com/products/indesign.html` Page design software Page design software is an alternative to word processors and comes in the form of desktop publishing (DTP) programs. These programs are used to create finished documents with good formatting and by inserting graphics or text. DTP programs include features similar to word processors; however, it is more likely that they use a formatter for preparing the page, rather than a content-editing program. A DTP program is good for creating a document where the information is more like a presentation than a regular word processor. It is often used for making posters, marketing materials, and booklets, along with an original design. * Adobe InDesign: `www.adobe.com/products/indesign.html` Adobe GoLive GoLive is an application that enables you to design a website quickly and easily. It provides a basic HTML editor to cut and paste sections of the HTML code you want to use. You can use this software to make an HTML page, which can then be viewed in a web browser, or you can work on HTML pages locally. Creating a website with GoLive is different from using a word processor or DTP program. It takes a different approach to content creation and editing, and it is good to use GoLive to allow ideas to flow freely before you start attempting to put them together

This article covers everything you need to know about editing and manipulating images in Photoshop Elements. Adobe Photoshop Elements Interface Like many other Adobe products, Photoshop

Elements comes with a simplified user interface. The interface is a combination of tools, fields and panels for working on an image. Use the default interface or use one of the other available interfaces. Most Photoshop actions and filters you add to an image in Photoshop can also be edited in Photoshop Elements. Changing the interface When you first use Photoshop Elements, there are three choices to make the interface look the way you like. The standard interface has the same look and feel as Photoshop. You can also use one of the other two interfaces. The second and third interfaces are closest to Elements but some of the tools are not available. If you want to use the standard interface, go to File > Preferences and then click the Interface button on the left. This brings up a pop-up window. Use the drop-down menu to select the interface you want to use. When you first open Photoshop Elements, you see the standard interface. This is the original interface as it was designed by Adobe. The next choice is the zoom user interface. This interface is closest to Elements but has less control. This interface is missing the Image Lens and the toolbox. Because the zoom user interface does not have access to the Image Lens, you cannot change the zoom of an image while working on it. You can only change it when you zoom in or out. This interface also has a limited set of tools. These two interfaces are mainly used to view or work on images. You are not limited to these interfaces. Many of the tools you will use are available in the other two interfaces. The last choice is the Templates interface. Like the zoom user interface, this has a limited set of tools and the Image Lens is missing. This interface lets you choose some settings based on predefined templates. So why would you use one of these other interfaces instead of the standard interface? When you first open Photoshop Elements, you will see the standard interface. You can easily skip the standard interface and start editing. At any time, you can switch to the zoom user interface or the templates interface. Any of the other interfaces are accessible as long as you are working on a document. If 388ed7b0c7

I remember how I used to have a similar mindset while I was a kid. I knew that we would always have rice. But as I grew up, I started realizing the burden of it. As a kid, I used to see it growing on the farm as if it was a magical plant. In little children, I used to go to their farms, too, for they used

Q: Angular $http.post with two GET parameters I am using an service like this:
$http.post('/item/get?id=' + id, {}), function (data, status, headers, config) { // status: 200, // data: {name: "TEST", category: "CATS"} }); It works ok. I am able to access the id and the rest of parameters in my controller by doing this (assume id is number and 'name' is a string):
$http.get('/item/get?id=' + id + '&name=TEST').success(function(data) { var name = data.name; var category = data.category; }); But I can't access them in the same way using $http.get() (see the code below): $http.get('/item/get?name=TEST').success(function(data) { // id, name and category are undefined }); My question is: Do I need to send the 'name' GET parameter, or this is not necessary? A: You need to send the name parameter, otherwise your second get is just going to give you the same data as your first. In your controller it's going to receive it as id. The name has to be in the post method because post method uses the http verb (AJAX POST) and the get method uses the request method and is a non-AJAX request. So you should be using: $http.post('/item/get', {name : "TEST"}) Q: How to select all rows containing the given name? I want to find all rows from a table that contain the name 'Paneer' and write that to another table. This is my sample SQL: SELECT * FROM (SELECT I.name FROM mytable I WHERE I.name LIKE 'Paneer' LIMIT 0, 10) Here, I am trying to get the 10 records containing the word 'Paneer'. Thanks. A: There are a few ways to do this depending on your data, mainly whether or not you want to use the LIKE operator or IF conditions. For
